Paul Devereux Memorial Home, paradise for little women under twelve years old, has had three hundred guests, of whom two hundred have received three weeks in the country instead of two, because of especial need.

This is the story of the past and present. That of the future—the very naer future—remains to be written.

At the end of this week each of these homes ends its complement of guests back to the city. From Eunice Home, across the Bay, will come one hundred "big" girls, but "litle moth-lundred" "big" girls, but "litle moth-lundred" "Double of flame."

Marie Virginia Smith, secretary of the Twilight Sleep Association, which has offices at 505 Fifth Avenue, denied yesterday that enthusiasm for twilight sleep had waned, and at the Long Island Hospital it was also said that just as many mothers continued to request the treatment. Dr. A. J. Rongy, obstetrician at the Jewish Maternity Hespital, and Dr. Minas S. Gregory, of Bellevue, however, said that twilight sleep in this country was doomed.

Miss Smith said the association was entirely satisfied with its work, and that it still aimed to erect an open hospital where women might take the treatment administered by skilled surgeons, and where general practitioners were in no danger of losing their patients.

"Then get out of here," Osborn commanded.

"How can 1?" the inspector asked, looking at the receding shores.

"Swim," suggested Osborn, "or else pay your fare."

The water looked unusually damp, and McGill paid. When the boat reached Glen Island, the inspector says the captain of the Clairemont refused to allow him to go back to the city on her. McGill trudged all the way to New Rochelle, after serving a summons on Osborn.

He grinned fiendishly when Magistrate Corrigan issued a warrant for the arrest of the printical captain and gave it to the police to serve.
